a test case of Soviet intentions. There are at least a few Western poker players who wonder if the card wasn't badly played.

The enthusiasm of last autumn has passed. The optimism that was felt after the Nov. 4 Big-Four meeting on Berlin has given way to realism and the old clichés are being heard again: "What's ours is ours, what's yours is negotiable." There is a great deal of suspicion in superpower relations these days and it doesn't augur well for a quick Berlin settlement.

The danger this time, however, is that Berlin doesn't stand alone.

U.S. Air Role In Highway-4 Battle Listed

But Command Keeps Some Data Secret

By Iver Peterson SAIGON, Jan. 28 (NYT).—The U.S. command released a general summary today of U.S. involvement in the joint Cambodian—South Vietnamese operation to clear High-way-4, south of Phnom Penh last week, but refused to provide a specific count on American bombing strikes or other air missions. The command disclosed only that since the first supply and communications support mission was flown from the helicopter carrier Cleveland Jan. 13, American Army air-planes flew "less than 25 sorties a day" ontil the end of the American involvement in the operation last Monday.

In addition to the U.S. Army aircraft, the command disclosed that U.S. Air Force jets, including B-52 homoers, had flown "less than 15 sorties a day."

Two B-52 missions, consisting of several planes each, were also flown in support of the road-opening operation, which was completed over the weekend when South Vict-namese and Cambodian ground troops recaptured the Pich Nil pass overlooking Highway-4, from which the Communists had for the last two months prevented the Cambodian capital from being supplied by road from the port at Kampons

MOSCOW, Jan 28 (UPI).-The Russians said today that they soon would begin a central time control system that would keep every clock in the country set exactly right.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said that precise time signals would be transmitted through city electrical power supplies every 24 hours. Special receivers in home clocks will react to the signal by setting tha clocks to the correct time.

The signal, Tass said, with come from "an array of quartz and hydrogen generators hidden away in a large glass cube deep under the earth. The site is situated far away from town since precise time instruments require sbsolute

Admirals of the Ocean Sea

There were once Lord Admirals of England who bade all alien vessels douse their topsails in the Channel, in honor of the island king. There was a Genoese seaman who claimed, and was granted by Spain, the grandiose title of Admiral of the Ocean Sea. The Romans (with much justice) and Mussolini (with rather less) boasted of the Mediterranean as "our sea." By comparison, the claims which Ecuador and other South American states have asserted to 200 miles of blue water off their coasts seem moderate. But only in comparison.

Ecuador, with a handful of frigates, has seized fishing vessels of the mightiest naval power in the world, and, when the United States suspended military ald to the government in Quito, called for a ministerial conference of the Organization of American States to consider this "coercion" as a violation of the OAS Charter. And the OAS. although tempering the call to one for consideration of "an urgent matter of common interest." has agreed.

The United States, not unnaturally, objected. It was willing to submit the subject to a peace-keeping committee of the OAS. which would, in effect, postpone a hemispheric showdown. It was also willing to bring the onestion before the International Cnurt of Justice, which makes good legal sense, since the limitation of national sovereignty over the open sea is obviously of more than American interest and applicability. But nationalism is on the rise in Latin America, and so is opposition to the Yanquis. The occasion seems opportuns for tweaking the beak of the eagle.

The earle would obviously prefer to play dove at this point; it has more important concerns in Latin America than fishing for tuna (with or without high mercury content) and it would not be pleasant to be outvoted in its own backyard. The whole problem of territorial waters is a thorny one, in the Arctic as in the South Pacific, and it would be unfortunate to have the slow. but reasonably steady, progress toward a genuinely international solotion for the many tangled themes raised by the world's oceans -food resources, pollution, exploitation of undersea minerals, security, freedom of transit_complicated by this quarrel.

Nevertheless, the dilemma will have to be faced. The United States cannot consent to the Latin American claim, which has no better legal basis than if some state were to proclaim its ownership of the Humboldt Current, or to assert admiralty over the Gulf

Washington certainly cannot be accused of provocative acts in this mini-crisis. But naither has it conceded the main point. It could possibly give Ecuador, nr any other country of South America, title to blue water which is the world's common heritage.

Report From Venus

been enormoosly advanced by the success of Venera-7. For the first time, a man-made device has landed on another planet and radiced information from its surface back to Both the United States and the Soviet Union have, of course, achieved this feat on the moon: and two teams of Americans have landed on and returned safely from that satellite. But the moon is a mere quarter of a million miles away, while Venus is tens of millions of miles distant even when it comes closest to earth, And the surface of Venus is an inferno with a temperature of almost 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit and an atmospheric pressure nearly 100 times that on the surface of earth-conditions far more trying for men's instruments than even the terrible cold and vacuum of the moon.

Soviet scientists have now demonstrated. after a series of earlier failures, that they have finally produced an instrument package capable of landing on Venus and operating there for some time despite that planet's extreme conditions of temperature and pressure. The significance of this fact becomes plain if one recalls the exploits of recent Soviet unmanned rockets to the moon, one of which scooped up a few ounces of lunar dust and returned it to earth, while the other has been perambulating about the lunar surface sending back television pictures and other data.

It requires little imagination to realize that the Soviet objective is to combine tha technological capabilities that have now been demonstrated separately on the moon and on Venus. The goal must be the creation of a system for the unmanned exploration of the planets. This will presumably include devices that will land on Venus, Mars and other planets and seek to hring samples of the environment of those worlds back to

It will also include future "Venuskhods," and "Marskhods" that will roam those planets much as the present Lunakhod-1

Man's exploration of the solar system has inches over the moon. Moscow's engineers still have a long way to go before those actomated planetary exploration systems are available and operating properly, but the exploits of Luna-16, Luna-17 and Venera-7 have now demonstrated that the basic concept of such systems is sound.

These perspectives for Soviet space exploration must inevitably force a rethinking of the American space effort. The Apollo program for manned study of the moon bas scored two magnificent triumphs, but it is perilously close to a dead end. as only a few more Apollo flights-including Sunday's scheduled Apollo-14 launch-are planned. The long-term thinking in NASA has been dominated by the idea of sending men to Mars; hut that enormously expensive project will require decades and it has never caught fire politically.

The attractiveness of spending huge sums to send Americans to Mars in the 1980s or 1990s is further dimmed by the likelihood that within the present decade Soviet unmanned devices will have brought back samples of Martian soil and atmosphere as well as transmitted data gathered by mobile machines traversing that planet. This country's present program for unmanned planetary exploration is much more modest and technically limited than Moscow's apparent 'tell U.S. les Fortunately there is enough pressure in Moscow and Washington now, originating in the scarcity of resources, so that space officials in both capitals are likely to be more receptive to joint ventures than they were in an earlier period when intense rivalry dominated. The important steps recently taken toward greater Soviet-American space cooperation are still small, but they provide a beginning for a much wider and mutually advantageous effort. This recent progress also suggests that there is now a political interest in cooperation in Moscow as well as in Washington, a welcome change from the situation in earlier years.

Nixon's Problem

The difficulty for President Nixon will be. in his own words, to fill the gap hetween promises and achievements. Mr. Nixon is rightly preoccupied with U.S. domestic problems. Yet one can ask whether, in proposing so extensive a program to a Congress trying to recapture powers progressively surrendered to the executive, he is not looking for a scapegoat with a view to the 1972 elections.

On the other hand, tha President practically avoided two crucial problems for American society and for the success of his policy. The first one is the fate of the minorities. The other is the effect of the war in Vietnam on the United States.

Of course, the President will define his foraign policy within a few days in another message to Congress. But it is difficult to overlook the burdens which "Vietnamization" and the "Nixon Doctrine" in general impose on the budget.

Will his appeals to youth be enough to prevent a new flare-up of the anti-war campaign, at a time when military operations supported by the United States are taking a new dimension? Mr. Nixon inevitably finds himself again faced with the same difficulty: to preach peace at homa without making it abroad.

Brandt—III: Westpolitik

By C. L. Sulzberger

BONN.- Currently, Europe's most talked about foreign policy is that of West Germany's Chancellor Willy Brandt, which seeks, by taking the initiative, to lower existing barriers with the Soviet bloc. Brandt says: "It's very hard to war that Europeans still want this degree of American engagement and presence. But this has to do not only with protecting West Germany but the future of Europe and the United States."

"We are all looking for balanced and mutual force reductions be-tween East and West and this may come a vital theme in future years. But it wouldn't make sense to reduce the American engagement bere before one enters into negotiations. On the other hand, Mills was at least forthright and unequivocal and ready with some ideas of his own. The repeated refrain from many other Democrats has been that they can't really tell what they think, much less do anything, until they receive from the White House the Nixon proposal, with every "I" dotted and every "T" crossed. This is not only the kind of cop-out that over the years caused Congress to lose the legislative initiative to the executive branch; it is also the kind of weak counter-punching politics that will permit Nixon to expand the political initiative he has already ecized.

Bohan has a real love affair with roses which have been out of fashion since the abstract painters and pop artists were discovered. In the new Dior collection there are red roses everywhere, in rose prints, artificial roses elung over shoulders, tucked into hair and in stones on evening clothes. A red rose tattoo is stitched on the chest of white crepe dresses, right in the center of an abstract figure.

Mme. Grès

One Paris designer who isn't thinking of giving up couture and heading for ready-to-wear is Mme. Gres. What her hands can do with a simple plece of fabric is incredible.

Mme Grès was showing short shorts long before anybody in the Paris couture thought of them. This year they go under beach, daytime and evening

Mme. Grès uses African prints, her own design, for some of her sporty daytime clothes. Though most of her dresses are soft, one of the interesting new ones is the white linen with the skirt in three tiers.

revolving stages they created the atmosphere of the shifting and inhospitable wilderness landscape into which Moses led his people.

Most of the earlier producers ni "Moses and Aron" have at-tempted to perform the third act by speaking the text over other music by the composer. Kaslik and the conductor,

Christoph Von Dohnanyi, decid-ed to stop after the second act, and the result was convincing. For one thing, that is where the music ends. Secondly, Kaslik handled the movements of Moses and Aron at the end of the second act in such a way as to suggest the principal events of the missing final act— Aron's death and the recovery part with such majestic power as to evoke images of Michelangelo's Moses or, for that matter. Hotter's own portravals of Wotan, His despair at being unable to articulate his conception of an invisible God, and at his betrayal by his mouthpiece, Aron, was one of rare eloquence.

As Aron, the creator of facile images for Moses' lofty conceptions, the tenor Jaroslav Kachel was an apt foil for Hotter, His voice is not a beantiful one, bot it was used shrewdly and vigorously to suggest the character's pride and amhition, weakness and self-justification. Dohnanyi's command of the vast musical forces was impressive in last night's performance, whether in the delicately strange chamber-music passages or in the colessal choral outbursts. As "Luin," not to mention Debus-sy's "Pelleas et Melisande" and

Mr. Brando can still dominate his scenes, but—as seems to be increasingly the case—be is ridiculously miscast. He portrays a ruthless British adventurer of the early 19th century who meddles for profits in the politics of a West Indian island. Again he affects the clipped Foreign Office accent of the English upper-class (as he did in "Mutiny on the Bounty") and attempts a colonial swag-ger. But it is a part that would

British agents instigate a coup d'état so that they may set up a puppet government, hut a revolt egainst all foreign authority breaks out and is suppressed with bru-tality. But, it is suggested, from the ashes of defeat a free country will one day rise.

"Queimada" is decidedly an ambitious film. Its aim is high, but its treatment is somewhat disappointing. Gillo Pontecorvo, its director, has, however, refrained from injecting the customary lovs interest. A more hanal script would certainly have included the English trader's wife or flancée, a fair maid from bome, who would havs argued politics with him at the embassy residence, and the black revolutionary would have had a wife or girl friend who would have egged him on with constant reminders that her brother had been executed by the colonial government.

While sparing us the usual twaddle. Portecorvo has not managed what is left very adroitly. The incidents of his story are not firmly united, his scenario is of a fragmentary nature, and the smouldering fires of the threatening uprising might have been more emphatically stressed. Nor has he handled the revolution itself with the required dynamic quality; it, too, is a collection of broken bits and snatcbes. "Queimada" has both intelligence and honesty, but, aside from the aforementioned performance of Evaristo Marquez, is curiously wanting in dramat-

Tourists in Spain

MADRID, Jan. 28 (AP),-Tourists visiting Spain in 1970 totaled 24,009,791, a record and 11.2 percent up over 1969. Official figures said income from tourism also was a record, estimated at between $1.6 billlon and $1.7 billion, up about 25 percent over 1989.

latest film, "Mourir d'Almer" (at the Marivaux, the Paramount-Elysées, the Bretagne and the George-Vi. It concerns a woman of 30, a teacher in a Rouen high school, whose romance with a 17-year-old boy, one of her pupils, leads to police intervention and her suicide.

It is a tale of passion, but a courtroom chill overtakes it as Cayatte retells it on the screen and the general impression is that of love letters being presented as evidence to an impartial and stone-faced judge. Annie Girardot succeeds in bringing life and sharp pathos to the role of its heroine and Bruno Oradal scores as her underaged lover; bearded and manly, he appears a trifle mature as a schoolboy whose parents are intent on guarding his sexual innocence.

The background and the other characters-especially the members of the youth's family-are clearly delineated and one never doubts the truth of this account of a persecuted schoolmistress. But one is rarely moved. Cayatt has stated the evidence too drily, too coldly, too ob-jectively, too legally. What is needed is an absent tenderness and deeper human understand-ing. The production is polished, all the acting is of high order, but the sub-zero tem-perature of the direction freezes

2 Restaurants In Italy Win High Rating

PARIS, Jan. 28.—The 1971 Guide Michelin to Italy gave its highest gastronomic rating in that country-two stars-to two more restaurants. But it re-tired two others from that category to keep the two-star total at 13.

The cuisine st Ranierl, in Rome, and Al Gambero, In Taranto, both former one-star restaurants, is now rated as "excellent, worth a detour." These are the first restaurants south of Florence to receive the twostar rating, which was started in Italy with the 1969 guide.

Retired from the category were two restaurants in the north, Dodici Apostoli, in Vemna and La Rocca at Ruta both of which now have one Michelin added 24 restaurants to its one-star category this year and dropped ten others to bring the total to 177.

The new guide, out this month, lists nearly 400 more botels and restaurants than the 1970 edition. It singles out 120 places as particularly agreeable or quiet and secluded.

German Steelmaker Finds Woes in U.S.

By Peter H. Prugh GEORGETOWN, S.C. (AP-DJ).—Georgetown Steel Corp., controlled by Korf In-dustrie und Handel GmbH of West Germany, is facing labor and pollution problems that may cause the parent company to reconsider its U.S. activities. Georgetown Steel 18 months ago built a $30 million mill here and Wolfgang Jansen, company president, says it is "the best decision we ever

However, Korf recently sold to Midland-Ross Corp., which ficers. had been a 25 percent partner in Georgetown Steel, an additional 24 percent interest. Some industry sources say Korf may sell more of Georgetown Steel to Midland-Ross, which is building a facility of its own next to the Korf-controlled mill. Korf has operations in Switzerland, Austria and Nigeria in addition to Germany. but the Georgetown venture is the first recent attempt by any German firm to run a steel mill in the United States.

Complaints Grow Since the mill went into production, there have been numerous complaints from city residents about the pollution. Georgetown Steel said it installed pollution-control equipment but that it has not worked as well as planned. South Ca-rolina's pollution control

The company's worst continuing problem is its labor situation. Last spring, the steel-workers union won the right to nt the workers. But after ten labor-management meetings there still was no contract. Since Aug. 15, the union has been on strike, leading to a series of clashes involving strikers, those who keep working and law-enforcement of-

During the start-up of the mill an accident killed a worker. Since then more than 250 employees have been injured, according to the union. Demands and Defense

It is demanding better train-ing, hetter medical treatment, more insurance benefits, availability of an ambulance and an agreement that nurses be on duty at all times. Mr. Jansen said the union has exploited the issue by encouraging workers to complain about every minor injury. Meanwhile. Georgetown Steel has continued to operate while atrikers are at its gates. In another labor problem, black workers say the company does not have enough black

In some ways the mill has worked out just as local people wanted it to. Even with the strike going on, 570 people from the town and nearby areas are working at wages well above prevailing local rates, although below those of union members feels as welcome or as optimistic as it once did. When contract talks stalled, the union took its case to the National Labor Relations Board, charging the company with "unfair labor practices." The board asked for a court injunction to force the company to meet with union representatives and this was recently granted. Both company and union officials have indicated there probably is a good

BLONDIE

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

The opening two-club bid was strong and artificial, and the three-club response was aceshowing, an idea that is popular in France, where the deal was published in the magazine Le Bridgeur, South showed spades and then jumped to six hearts, forcing his partner to give preference at the six-level.

Against six spades, West led the diamond queen, solving South's chief problem. When East won with the queen and returned a diamond, South had no trouble in making 12 tricks. thanks to the favorable distribution in the major suits.

The magazine editors point-ed out that the play is more interesting if East happens to hold four spades to the jack. After routine defense, such as a diamond return at the second trick, South has no difficulty. He plays two high trumps, and when West falls to follow to the second round, dummy can be entered with a club lead to finesse for the spade jack. But East can foresee this possibility. Holding four spades headed by the jack, he should return a club at the second trick, away from his king and straight bination, This seems like an absurd maneuver, but it is most un-likely to hurt the defense. South can hardly have any loser he wishes to discard on the clubs: That declarer has three dia-monds and a void club is not a serious danger for East, for South would be more pessimistic in the bidding, fearing that dummy would be useless.

into dummy's ace-queen com-

On a very high level, South should discern the reason for East's strange defense. He must be trying to remove dummy's entry before his $J \times X \times holding$ in trumps stands revealed by two trump leads.

The declarer therefore gives East credit for brilliant defense and takes a first-round finesse against the spade jack, making the contract just the same.

THE AMERICAN HEALTH EMPIRE An Analysis of Power, Profits and Politics in American Medicine

▲ Health-PAC Book prepared by Barbara and John Ehrenreich. Random House. 279 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Edward Edelson

607 HE American Health Empire" is yet another book about the sad state of American medicine—but don't stop read-ing there. This one is different, It is galvanizing, irritating, flawed and fascinating, and it presents an argument that has never been touched in what can be called the standard book on the health care crisis.

The standard book has been written under a score of titles by a score of authors. The standard book's villains and heroes are unvarying. On one side, in the black bats, are the old-line doctors, whose spokes-man is the American Medical Association and whose aim is to keep American medicine disorganized in the interests of personal profit. The men in the white hats are the medical liberals, working out of modern hospitals and university-based medical centers, eager to press medical research, hopeful about drastically different methods of financing medical care (such as national health insurance) and anxious to use computers and the other tools of technology for the benefit of the consumer. If we can just help the liberals beat the AMA, says the stand-ard book, our health care problems will be over,

It is at this point, where the standard book ends, that "The American Health Empire" begins. Its authors are members of a group of young activists working out of a self-created think-tank called the Health Policy Advisory Center. They present the reader with an entirely new villain: the very medical liberal whom most anthors present as the last great hope of American medicine.

Health PAC dismisses the AMA briefly as a declining organization whose prestige and power are falling rapidly, chiefly interested in fighting a forlorn rear-guard action against the 20th century. (Just last year, for the first time, the AMA's membership fell below 50 percent of the nation's physician population. The AMA is now a minority group.)
Health-PAC follows the first rule of investigatory reporting: Look where the money goes. It finds that the money is going chiefly to the large universitybased "medical empires" that are run by medical liberals. These centers carry on most medical research, use most of the new-medical technology, sponsor most of the community action medical programs.

Between 1960 and 1969, Health-PAC says, the amount of money spent on medical care in the United States doubled. but the quality of medical care for most Americans held even at best, while costs are rocket-ing beyond the reach of even the respectable middle class. The standard book explains the paradox of rising costs and lowered standards by the greed of individual doctors, Health-PAC blames it on institutionalized greed—the greed of the "medical emphes." Those empires, Health-PAC argues, are not dedicated to medical care. Rather, they are dedicated to three goals: in-creasing institutional profits and individual salaries, feeding medical research that often has only a tenuous relationship to any real medical needs, and insuring its own perpetuation by controlling medical educa-

Health-PAC goes on to see forth what can only be called an institutionalized plot against good health care. Most of the money that pays for health care comes from Blue Cross, Blue Shield Medicare and Medicaid, the book says. But the hospitals that get this money control the organizations that give the money, through a system of in-terlocking directorates. So "the Bines' never question the size of hospital bills—which means that the hospitals can raise prices as much as they please —while the hospitals, in turn, are always ready to support requests for higher medical in-strance rates. The medical in-strument and drug companies, sensing profit opportunities, are in the conspiracy too.

The whole argument is singning in its sweeping denunciation of every standard hope for better medical care. It is, in fact, just crazy enough to be true. Unfortunately, "The American Health Empire" has such rerious flaws that its basic argument is imperiled. To start with, the volume is full of statistics, anecdotes and quotations supporting its case. Yet it lacks supporting references for any of these. These charges will be hotly contested. It is inexcusable to omit the documentation that would permit an objective evaluation by the reader.

Secondly, "The American Health Empire" is not really a book about the United States. It is a book about New York City, All of its detailed case histories are from New York, a situation justified by the authors on the grounds that New York traditionally is a step ahead of the rest of the nation in the field of medicine.

Third, the Health-PAC activists are so eager to make their case that they often forget common sense and internal consistency. Firing wildly in all directions may be great for the soul, but it is not good journal-

But after all the faults are ticked off, the basic value of "The American Health Empire" remains. Even if only half of its shots are on target-and that seems a reasonable estimate-it seems to come clos of the health crisis than any other book yet published. Un-reasonable and partisan as it is, it is required reading for anyone concerned with better health

Edward Edelson frequently writes about science and medicine for Book World, the literary supplement of The Washington Post, where this review first appeared.

Dishes and Power

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON. - Reflections w upon washing the dishes: This, then, is what they mean when they grouse about sexism? These tedious plates with tiny chunks of grease bonded to the pattern, this splattered lamb fat congealing on my trousers. No wonder they wear those dreary aprons. Still. work.Something to be said for that, Leaves you time to think.

About? That girl baving the martini at lunch at the Black Bird Café today. Girls having martinis at lunch, pretty ones like that one too, makes you wonder wbo runs the office in the afternoon nowadays, what with their bosses all coming back from lunch fried on three and four

No good! No good at all! Must be careful of excessively strong judgments. Grave weakness of mine. Modify, modify! Always modify.

Still, not much good. Dishwashers oot much good. Not much improvement over old-fashloned Brand X dishpan washing techniques just like mother used to make. Still. women are grateful for it. Drive you up the wall to buy them a dishwasher, then figure you'll float. I guess, if they complain about it not being much good. Poor things.

Trouble is, people who have power never wash the dishes. Suppose Nixon had to bathe in this steaming mess of grease. coffee grounds, salad oil every night. He would soon get on the phone to some Bill or Bob knows, millionaire, make it all in dishwashers.

"You know what, Bill or Bob?" Nixon would say. "The automatic dishwasher isn't much better than the old-fashloned dishpan. Why don't you make one that really washes the dishes automatically?"

And Bill or Bob would say, "No kidding? Not much good, eh? You don't say, Mr. Presi-deot?" Because Bill or Boh would never have washed dishes elther, too rich, too much power, so wouldn't know that their own machine wesn't much good. My hand! Scalded! scalded!

And nobody even cares! They're still sitting in there watching that stupid television set. playing it so loud they can't even hear me scream.

That's the trouble with Amerlca today. People who have power to make things happen don't do things that people do, so they don't know what needs to happen. Take railroads. If Nixon bad to ride the railroad California, San Clemente, like people do, instead of tlying out in his own private superjetliner, railroad service in this country would soon be fit for human consumption again.

Same with getting to work. Every big shot blg enough to things happen arrives at the office in a chauffeured car. which then double parks at the door in case Mr. Shot decides on the sour of the moment, no time to look for distantly parked car, that be'll run out to Callfornia in his private superjetliner on which some poor oppressed woman dishwasher is scraping ber knuckles off for an inefficient automatic washing machine.

Then wheo people start throwing dishes, the power crowd says, "Shame on you! What is a little thing like not finding a parking space, or not getting a good dishwash out of your machine, or taking the filthy, purposely uncomfortable train to California, compared to the great things you are doing under our inspired leadersbip to stop Communism cold at the DMZ?

Stopping Communism at the DMZ is a great thing. In case J. Edgar Hoover is tapping my mind I want to get that thought clearly on the record, but we would be better situated to admire it if we weren't too busy looking for parking space, try-ing to find a decent train to California, or scraping the pots with saodpaper.

The trouble with America today is that people who have the power to make things happen don't live. like people do, so don't know what really needs to be made to happen. I fust thought that a couple of minutes ago, you say?

Oh well. I broke a cup a couple of minutes ago too, but it didn't stop me from breaking another one just now.

What fackass poured cold gravy all over the floor?

How History Is Hindering Modern Rome

By Paul Hofmann

OME (NYT).-When this ancient city must dig, it's not like blasting a bole into the rock of Manhattan.

Rome's subsoil is soit and full of still unexplored remains from past civilizations, and the spade that strikes at something solid may have hit a statue from classical times or an early Christian catacomb. Archaeologists will soon swarm all over the site and delay work indefinitely -unless some private contractor is cynical enough to have the suspected historical treasure swept away by a buildozer in the dark of night.

Pasquale Cutitta, an immigrant from Naples who has for the last six years been ripping open Rome's surface in various construction jobs, says with a grin: "If I see any old stones, I cut right through with the jackhammer. Isn't the Colosseum enough of a ruin for Rome?"

It is for many, maybe most Romans who are surfeited by the mementos of their city's past grandeur, among which they live but hardly noticing them any-

However, Dr. Elisa Lissi, a government archaeologist, declares that "most contractors now understand that it is better for them to cooperate with the authorities in charge of antiquities, and they probe sites together with us before starting big building projects." Another government scholar said: "Don't mention my name because I'm running an archaeological spy network to prevent developers from destroying or spiriting away ancient treasures."

In public works projects in the Italian capital, cholars hover near the laborers most of the time. This is a reason—though not the only one-why the Roman subway is taking so long to build.

Construction started in 1964 on Line A of the projected Metropolitana network. The line ruetches from a place called Curate's Inn on the city's southeastern outskirts for 14.4 miles to the Piazza Risorgimento near the Vatican, traversing Rome's historical center.

In six years, work has made little progress, because of financial and technical difficulties, and it may be 1975 or later before Line A is in operation. One station, which was to be built in the busy Piazza della Repubblica, will have to be shifted because of the archaeclogists. On the site where the station was originally planned, the ruins of a large dential building and vast garden of the early imperial age have come to light. Subway plans were revised, moving the projected Piazza della Repubblica station from the area of the buried garden to spare the remains of the resideotial structure, perhaps the vills of a wealthy Roman family. Subway riders will one day be able to view the newly discovered ruins through a plate-glass partition. The archaeological area behind the plate glass will become an underground museum

Work on Line A has led to other discoveries. A huge stone sarcophagus was found near the ancient Ports Furbs in an area that is now a workers' suburb in the city's southeast, and once was a pagan pecropolis, or cemetery.

The subway work has also cleared up some controversial questions about ancient Rome's topography, providing cines that have enabled scholars to trace exactly the layout of the elaborate and affi-clept Roman aqueduct system.

Right now archaeologists are holding their breath as an exploratory shaft is. being sunk into the central Piezza Barberini, where another subway station is to be built. Annibale De Biasi, who works in the Industry Ministry nearby, gazes into the deepening hole and says: "Let's hope they don't find any antiquities."

The government worker explains: 'It takes me an bour every morning to get to work by bus when I could commute by subway in ten minutes. I'd like to ride the subway before I retire from the job. Those professors think Romans want to live in a museum. We want to live in a city that functions." Most of the tunnels of the projected Roman subway network-beyond Line A' loom Line B and Line C, possibly to be built in the 1980s-will be dug deep, 50 to 60 feet below street level. The intention is to avoid time-consuming encounters with archaeology that normally occur about 15 feet underground

At the 15-foot level, an archaeological treasure trove was unearthed in November when a private contractor began building an underground garage in the Via dei Maroniti near the Trevi Fountain in the center of Rome. The site had been occupied for hundreds of years by a vast building that in the 16th century had housed a college for foreign priests.

Underneath was a section of ancient Rome that up to now had been unknown to experts and is a blank spot on all old maps and reconstructions.

The most arresting aspect of the newly discovered ancient Roman neighborhood is evidence that it had apparently been candened in a hurry around AD 300. Several stone columns, slabs and other building materials were found that seem to have been brought there for some construction project, but were never put to use.

Dr. Listi describes herself as a onewoman archaeological first-aid squad, because she is often called when subway or construction workers have ancient remains or artifacts. The state and city fine arts and an iquity departments later decide what to do with such finds.

The removal of a comparatively thin layer of earth and debris preparatory to laying a new street up Mount Mario, a 456-foot hill on the city's northern outskirts, but not one of Rome's historie seven hills-brought to light last summer what is now considered the best-preserved example of ancient Roman roadwork here It consists of 150 feet of an 18-foot-wide highway, from the first century, smoothly paved with flagstones and flanked by terre-cotta drains.

Scholars are probing the subsoil in some special research projects, particularly in the Roman Forum and on Palatine Hill overlooking it, but four-fifths of the public budget for archaeology in Rome is now spent to protect and restore the vast treasures already oo display. Air pollution and vibrations caused by the increasingly heavy traffic during the last few years have sharply quickened the rate of decay.

PEOPLE: Of the Ant

"Ants aren't all they are re-ported to be," say George and Jeanette Wheeler of Palm Springs, Calif. The husbandwife researchers have devoted years to studying the creatures, heroes of fables on industriousness. "Whenever we view ananthill we get the impression of tremendous amounts of activity, but that is merely because there are so many anta and TY. they all look alike," the Wheelers concluded. The individual ants spend a great deal of time just loafing and, worse than Prince Charles's $246 suits shabby?. Gad, no, the royal tailor said. Master tailor Teddy Watson, who makes the twopiece suits for Prince Philip and Princes Charles, denounced criticism of Charles's dress in the British men's fashion magazine Tailor and Cutter. Fashion consultant Karl Dallas, writing in the magazine, said Charles wears ontdated jackets and baggy trousers and follows "a cult of studied shabbiness."

that, the worker ants, who are all females, spend a lot of time primping." (Le Fontaine take note.)

Dallas said Charles Wears modern wide ties with narrow-lapelled jackets. "This throws the narrow lapels of his fiftiesstyle jacket out of proportion." Charles's pants? "At the top they are as baggy as an old man's."

Buckingham Palace kept silent. But in Dover Street. tailor Watson announced he was "furious. I think I could speak for both of us (he and Charles) if I say Mr. Dallas's remarks leave us cold. No amount of ontside criticism would sway him to give up his own good taste for uncomfortable wear to satisfy the changing tastes of Carnaby Street.

Lewis Bedford was on a rabbit hunt when the wheels of his pickup truck sank into a salt lake pear Adelaide, Australia. So to free it, Lewis, a 23-yearold laborer, borrowed a fourwheel-drive vehicle from a peighbor. That got stuck too. To free the truck and the oeighbor's vehicle he then "borrowed" a $14,000 earth-moving machine from a nearby con-struction camp. It got stuck. To free the truck, the oeighbor's vehicle and the earth-moving machine he ran back to the camp and 'borrowed' something a little more powerful-a $93,000 mobile scraper. It also ended up stuck fast in the salt lake.

Lewis admitted taking the two construction vehicles without permission Wednesday and promised a magistrates' court at Port Augusta to pay $741 compensation. The magistrate, P. M. Kelley, taking note of the "extraordinary facts," fined him only $30. All the vehicles were recovered from the salt lake by experts with heavy machine-

Princess Margaret, taking a travel tip from her husband yesterday, flew economy class from London to Barbados where she plans to join Lord Snowdon for a month's vacation. By rubbing elbows with ordinary passengers, the princess and Snowdon saved 195 ($228) right at the beginning of their holls, day. Accompanying Princess Margaret was Colin Tennand known as "the king of Mustique" because of the Caribbean island he owns, the one where the cruise ship Antilles ran aground and burned. Tennant 2216 Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon some land on his island as a wedding present.
